Pinestone announces music festival

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

The Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre will host a music festival later this summer, with tickets on sale now.

"It's similar to what the Haliburton Forest did last year," general manager John Teljeur said in reference to the Forest Festival. That event has been cancelled this year.

Shows for the Edgewater Music Festival will take place Sundays in August, with acts Alfie Zappacosta, Circle 5 and The Nylons already booked.

Grammy- and Juno-award-winning singer-songwriter Zappacosta will play Sunday, Aug. 7, reggae band Circle 5 on Sunday, Aug. 14, and a capella group The Nylons on Sunday, Aug. 28, as part of their farewell tour.

Teljeur said the Pinestone is working on booking other acts and that some shows may also be added on weekday evenings.

Performances are scheduled to take place outside near the pond at the front of the resort, with seating for about 700 and are being produced by Lesley English, who's produced numerous shows throughout the county and is a former manager of the Forest Festival.

"We're going to operate the entire event ourselves," Teljeur said, adding that food and beverages from the resort's new restaurant, Stone 21, would be available at the concert venue. "We're going to have the restaurant

OPP release Sunshine List information

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

Twenty-two officers from the Haliburton Highlands OPP detachment made the province's public salary disclosure list – the so-called "sunshine list" – in 2015.

The salaries of those 22 officers total nearly $2.5 million.

Earlier this year, the Times published a story showing salary ranges for local employees who made the list, which shows the names and positions of those earning $100,000 or more per year.

The Public Salary Disclosure Act was brought in under the government of former premier Mike Harris.

While most publicly paid employees are searchable by their direct employer – the County of Haliburton or Trillium Lakelands District School Board, for example – OPP officers are not searchable by detachment. Rather, their names are listed under the Ministry of Community Safety and Correctional Services at large.

Therefore, it's necessary to have a detachment staff list in order to complete a search. In the past, the list has been provided to the newspaper without issue.

When the Times requested a staff list this year, the communications officer from the local detachment responded that, "due to

There will also be a charitable aspect to the festival, with some proceeds scheduled to go to local organizations including the YWCA Women’s Shelter and food banks, among others.

Teljeur has been trying to organize a music festival in the community for years, including at the Minden fairgrounds.

“It’s a very different version of it,” Teljeur said. “Bringing musical acts into the area is always something I’ve wanted to do.”

Tickets can be purchased at the resort and soon on its website.

Take a kid fishing

Local children were given an opportunity to go fishing thanks to the Ministry of Natural Resources enforcement officers based in Minden, who took the three winners and their two siblings for the Take a Kid Fishing initiative. Conservation officer Steve Murray, summer experience student Nichole Orecchio, conservation officer Craig Smith, Take a Kid Fishing contest winners Owen Nicholls and Matthew Vargas with his brother Alex, contest winner Victoria Robertson with her brother Jonathan and conservation officers Scott Bird and Brian Alexander spent the day fishing. Winners, who were J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School students, were given fishing rods and tackle boxes with lures and associated fishing equipment bought at local retail outlets. They won for creating posters with one of three themes: knowing your fish species, protecting the natural resources, and is the season open? /DARREN LUM Staff

Cable systems purchase next step to fibre optic network

With the purchase of the cable TV systems in Haliburton and Minden, North Frontenac Telephone Company says it’s another step closer to establishing a fibre optic network in Haliburton and Minden.

Earlier this year, NFTC’s representative Grant Roughley made delegations to both councils discussing plans to investigate the feasibility of providing ultra high-speed Internet to the area.

Since that time, NFTC has moved into the design phase, which will allow for a cost analysis of bringing fibre optic networks to the villages. This analysis is required in order to decide whether to proceed.

Roughley said the company’s purchase of Eastlink’s cable TV systems on July 8 is a sign of commitment to the area, as it offers a potential footprint for a fibre optic system.

“It is our hope that these systems will contribute to the feasibility of constructing new fibre optic networks in these towns,” he said.

Fibre optic cable allows for ultra high-speed Internet, digital cable TV (including HD channels) and phone services.

“Some time will be required for the project team to evaluate the distribution network of the newly acquired cable systems to determine how it can be incorporated into the fibre optic network design,” said Roughley.

Notices on the change of ownership and new contact information will be sent and NFTC wants to ensure the transition goes smoothly for existing customers. Those with questions can email info@nftctelecom.com or call 1-888-638-3575.

Editor’s note: North Frontenac Telephone Company is 50 per cent owned by London Publishing Corporation. London Publishing Corporation shares the same ownership as White Pine Media, which in turn owns the Minden Times and Haliburton Echo.

Connect to Highlands history at Stanhope Heritage Day

by JENN WATT
Editor

Stanhope Heritage Day gives attendees the opportunity to roll up their sleeves and engage with the history of the Highlands.

Planned for Saturday, July 16, the popular event in Algonquin Highlands is all about experiencing traditional arts and crafts, farming methods, food preparation and technology.

A long list of demonstrations and opportunities for all ages makes for an action-packed day at the Stanhope Museum grounds.

"It's a really great family day. It's all inclusive. It has something that appeals to everyone," says co-ordinator Charlene McConnell.

For $3 a person (free for kids five and younger), you can plan to spend the day, listening to live music, taking in a wildlife demonstration, seeing how quilts are made, checking out a colony of bees, seeing cheese and butter made or checking out antique cameras.

The day kicks off at 9 a.m., which is when you'll want to arrive to get the pick of the baked goods. The Tent Shakers Band gets started at 10 a.m. and Celtic Slow Jam takes over at 11.

Throughout the day you can visit various booths, see farm animals, and children can take a ride on a pony. You can learn how to tap a tree to make maple syrup and watch as a carver creates a wooden spoon with an axe. There's taxidermy, leatherwork, and artists creating paintings and pen and ink drawings.

for sale (always a favourite) will satisfy your sweet tooth. McConnell points out that the day is incredibly affordable for families.

"There's no charge for anything else [beyond admission]. So the kids are making crafts, they're getting on ponies, they're getting their face painted ... there's lots and lots of things to do and it's really fun and educational," she said.

The impetus of the event is to bring awareness to Highlands heritage and history, so the focus isn't on making money, it's on knowledge and understanding.

If you'd like to purchase lunch, there is a barbecue running from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Stanhope Heritage Day runs from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday July 16 at the Stanhope Museum grounds: 1123 North Shore Rd., north of Carnarvon. Parking is free. See the full listing of events at stanhopemuseum.on.ca.

Plummer new HHHS CEO

by ANGELA LONG
Times Staff

With unanimous approval of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services board of directors, Carolyn Plummer has been appointed president and chief executive officer of the HHHS. The announcement came on the evening of July 7 after several months of reviewing more than 40 applications.

"We are confident that Carolyn is the best candidate and is well positioned to lead HHHS going forward to fulfill our strategic mandate and our vision for the future of health care in Haliburton County," board chairman Dave Bonham stated in a press release.

Plummer couldn't be happier. Even though she's originally from Cookstown and has owned a home in Toronto since the '90s, Plummer "feels more at home in Haliburton than anywhere else," she said in a phone interview.

Plummer said she fell in love with Haliburton the moment she "walked out the deck and looked across the lake" while visiting her boyfriend's family cottage on Silver Beach. She was 19. More than 20 years later, ever since HHHS hired Plummer as director of patient care and chief nursing executive at the end of September 2015, the now-married couple have been renting a house on that very same beach.

For the past seven months, Plummer has served as interim president and CEO. The news makes Plummer feel excited about building more permanent foundations for both a new home and the HHHS team.

"What I love most about working for HHHS is our collaborative approach," she said. "I have the ability to drive change that involves everybody."

Bonham gave Plummer the news in person just as she was leaving the hospital to go to Toronto. Her mother-in-law underwent surgery for breast cancer and Plummer stayed in Toronto for the next few days.

"I haven't even seen anyone at HHHS in person yet – the staff, the other directors. I just walked out the door knowing I'd been appointed."

Plummer intends to celebrate both her mother-in-law's recovery and her new appointment as soon as possible. Then she'll get back to work.

"We're starting fresh with a great plan and a great team," she said. "First thing on the list? Ensuring there's sufficient coverage in emergency coverage, immediately."

But for now, Plummer is still adjusting to her new title.

"I'm very happy," she said. "I'm very excited the board made the decision it did. I'm looking forward to the years to come."

On the list

WELL, WHAT DO you know?
OPP detachment staff lists are public information.

Cough.

As regular readers of this publication will be aware, earlier this year, the local OPP detachment refused to release a current staff list to the newspaper for the purposes of a public salary disclosure story – the annual “sunshine list” story.

The Public Salary Disclosure Act was brought in under the Harris government and mandates the annual listing of publicly paid employees earning $100,000 or more per year.

While most employees are searchable by their direct employer – the Township of Minden Hills, for instance – OPP officers are not listed by detachment, but rather grouped as a whole with the thousands upon thousands of employees of the Ministry of of Community Services and Correctional Services.

The newspaper requires the names of the officers reporting to the local detachment in order to complete the search.

While in the past receiving a copy of the detachment staff list has not been a problem, this year, the paper was told that, “due to the operational nature of your request, that is something that cannot be provided by the OPP.”

Hmm . . . OK.

Are requests for information on crimes and collisions, something the paper issues constantly, not also “operational in nature,” then?

It seems the response was not so valid.

It seems like it was a meaningless pile of flaming word garbage designed to sound somehow official.

The paper filed a Freedom of Information request for the staff list, which it received without challenge from the ministry, because the list is public information.

A former Haliburton Highlands OPP detachment commander once asked how the detachment could have a better relationship with the local media.

Giving us blatantly public information when we ask for it would be a great start.

Given the ongoing controversy and conversation over ever-increasing policing costs in Haliburton County and other communities throughout Ontario, the way this situation was handled casts a poor light on the local detachment, making it appear it was trying to hide the figures from the public, the public to which it is accountable and the public which pays its members handsomely.

“WHAT HAVE YOU DONE WITH THE DOCTOR?”

Poor, poor prettiful me

U.S. OLYMPIC WRESTLER Adeline Gray was recently on record complaining about sexism in a feature article about her in CNN’s Body Issue magazine. The gist of the article was that some people did not take female wrestlers, even of her world-class calibre, seriously.

One major grievance she had was that she had been told several times by men that she was “too pretty” to wrestle – despite being a three-time wrestling world champion.

OK, here’s my dilemma.

I’d like to be supportive of Adeline Gray but I’m just not sure how to do this best.

You see, if I were to meet her and say, “Adeline, I just want you to know I don’t think you’re too pretty at all,” she might take that the wrong way. Next thing you know, I’d be in Emergency wondering what happened as a doctor is untangling my clavicles.

I guess I could err on the side of caution and say, “Adeline, don’t listen to them. I happen to think you are pretty enough to be a male wrestler...” Then, you’d just have to brace yourself and see how she took that. I’m guessing it would not be good.

The point is, pretty has nothing to do with her chosen profession and it’s a ridiculous – and possibly dangerous – thing to suggest that it does, one way or the other.

I know this because I too suffer from this debilitating issue. Even now, pretty is a word that people commonly use to describe me.

People I know have called me as pretty dense, pretty clueless, pretty incoherent, pretty short and so on.

They don’t elaborate on any of this but a fellow picks up on the subtle implications. I get it; the common denominator is pretty.

Honestly, this makes me more than a bit uncomfortable – and, quite frankly, I do worry my pretty little head about it. You see, I’m not just another pretty face – which coincidentally is the only thing my critics and I agree on.

My main problem is I don’t have any wrestling skills to fall back on, so the best

I could do is write the person a scathing email. But, for what? For insisting that I’m pretty?

I could pray about it. I know this works because once, when I was 10, a girl in my class called me handsome in front of all my friends. I prayed at bedtime that night that it would never happen again and, thus far, the Good Lord has kept his word.

As for the P-word, if someone has the nerve to say this to me in person, I will be ready. I’ll get all medieval on them and say, “Doth thou truly meanest this?”

Then, hopefully, they’ll just mumble to themselves and walk away, just like my teachers used to do.

All I’m saying here is that I understand completely what Adeline is going through. It’s not easy being too pretty for your chosen profession. Every night I sit down after dinner and wonder who is cutting out the photo that accompanies this column and placing in their scrapbook today? And then, I wonder why do they keep that scrapbook at the bottom of their bird cage?

Between you and me, that seems pretty crazy.

Into the ghostly cabin

This is the third and final instalment of a summer campfire ghost story.

THE OPEN DOOR revealed a scene like nothing Shainie had ever seen. Shafts of sunlight entering the broken windows and cracks in the walls sliced the smoky dimness of the interior, highlighting once normal cottage contents now succumbing to years of neglect and decay. She could taste on the tip of her tongue the sour-sweet smell of damp rot.

Puffs of dust rose around her feet as she moved in slow motion through the cabin. A couch along one wall looked like a cartoon sketch, springs protruding through a faded floral fabric that had been scratched, chewed and soiled by mice and other forest creatures seeking protection from winter storms. A kitchen table and chairs stood beside the side window, plates, knives and forks set out in the dust and animal droppings as if waiting for a family of ghosts to arrive for an evening meal.

As she backed away from the table, Shainie's boot tripped against an object, sending a scraping noise echoing through the room, and in turn setting off scurrying noises in the cabin's dark corners. She looked down and was horrified to see the object was a doll with its face chewed off.

A shadow with glowing eyes hissed and squealed from a corner. Shainie screamed and bolted to the rear door. Sunlight blinded her as she crashed through the rotting plank door.

The rear entrance top step was missing and her boot smashed through the next one, sending her tumbling onto debris scattered below.

When her eyes opened a few seconds later, Shainie wondered where she was and why her forehead was wet and throbbing. She touched the blood seeping from a gash that extended from her right eyebrow to her right temple. The fear that had seized her inside the cabin took hold of her again as she got to her feet unsteadily. She staggered, panicky and disoriented, towards the cliffs overlooking the lake.

She stumbled along not knowing where she was going or why, confused by alternating dizziness and blackness. The lake shimmered seemingly miles below her feet, which had difficulty rooting her firmly to the ground. Suddenly they were not rooted at all, and she sensed a rushing all around her, and the sky getting farther and farther away as she fell through the air above the lake.

The wildness and wetness of a storm tore at her face. The lake tossed and roared. The wind screamed like a tormented animal. A smashed canoe and a girl calling like a loon drifted by in her unconsciousness.

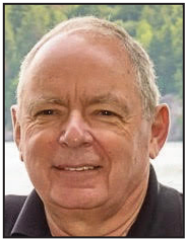

Then a light, a brilliant light steady and safe drawing her closer and closer to Ghostly Point. The light softened and through it came the blurred outline of a face, her mother's face, followed by her mother's voice, then the pine ceiling and other familiar surroundings of her cottage bedroom.

That evening, after the gash on Shainie's head had been cleansed and bandaged, and after her shock had been soothed by a few hours' sleep under a down comforter, Shainie sat with her family on the deck overlooking Shkendang Lake. A thunderstorm had just swept the lake, leaving behind a gentle grey mist and a tranquility that deepened with the advancing twilight.

Shainie's parents had told her about waking that morning to a noise at the dock. They had looked out to see their daughter lying wet and unconscious on the dock while the stern of a birch bark canoe disappeared in the distance.

They all were lost in their reflections about this strange day, staring into the greyness when a breeze parted the mist on the lake, revealing the dark outline of Ghostly Point. Then through the dimness appeared a light, faint but clearly visible to everyone sitting on the deck across the bay. Before anyone could speak, the breeze carried to them a low moan, almost a sobbing that crept across the glassy waters and along shoreline before becoming lost in the thickness of the trees.

"Moong. Wenesh aa-zhwebak? Mooooohhng. G'giigoonke na gami-igoong? Loon. What happened? Loo...oon. Are you fishing on the lake?"

Fantastic service

To the Editor,

As a longtime cottager in the Minden Hills area, I know there are many wonderful businesses, from store owners to the many companies available to fulfill our requests.

I would like to mention two that I have recently had the pleasure of working with at our cottage.

John Fountain Electric – and particular mention of Brad.

Our cottage is on an island which adds an additional caveat to getting things done. However, working as a team with John, Brad and Greg we were able to get what we needed to service our Internet needs and TV requests. Brad had a wealth of knowledge to share, giving us the best advice on what services would best suit our needs and problem-solved issues that arose in the installations. He was always pleasant and willing to go the extra mile.

Minden Electric – I have wanted to install ceiling fans in our cottage for years but ran into difficulties with our place being an older cottage with a cathedral ceiling.

I had the pleasure of speaking to Angie, the receptionist who helped me problem solve our needs and the best way to tackle them. Through pictures sent and multiple emails we were able to get the project started.

Tim arrived one Monday morning and what a great job he did! His suggestions, solutions and execution to some of the issues we had with this task were just excellent. Kudos to Steve, owner of Minden Electric for hiring such a skilled individual.

UpRiver Trading Company – I would be remiss not to mention this fabulous store on Minden's Main Street. So many interesting products, from cards to gifts to coffee. It is a must-stop for my friends visiting from Toronto.

There are many other wonderful companies in Minden but felt I needed to comment on these three that have stood out for me this year.

Return to community volunteering

To the Editor,

I write this not to dwell on the past, but to help share a thought on what Minden Hills might do differently to re-engage volunteers across the municipality.

My family and I had always jumped in to volunteer, we always looked forward to certain events and we felt better connected to the community by volunteering. But then the municipality around 2010 implemented a formal advisory committee that led to all sorts of unnecessary problems and unfortunate power struggles for our hometown.

And now we read about the lack of people volunteering, while at the same time, we ourselves are missing volunteering. Yet let's be clear we would never ever in a million years give our time and effort to volunteer for a formal advisory committee ever again.

Our two children were both young when we did a lot of volunteering, and now they are young adults, and I truly hope that they can learn for themselves the self-reward and special connection a person feels when volunteering for their community. Minden Hills should consider making it easy for people to volunteer. There are a lot of individuals who want to make a difference by volunteering. Simply let them. Do not force them into joining formal advisory committees.

Prior to these formal advisory committees many different individuals would step up to host a community event (baseball game, barbecue, picnic) or fundraiser (hockey pool, raffle, bake sale) and they would get support, and they would make a difference, and they would feel that extra special connection to their community. It was fun and it was even a little competitive as it would challenge others in the community to get involved as well in their own way so there was always something going on or being planned, and by all corners of the entire community. I do not see that anymore, as the municipality and their advisory committee has taken the control and the desire away from the rest of the community.

How about returning to a community driven process. That way if a family wanted to hold an October bake sale to support the community centre, they could. Or if a local gardener wanted to donate some flowers for a community centre garden, they could. Or if a high school student needed community hours and could cut the grass, they could. Taking us back to a place where everyone can get involved and help out when and how they can. Make volunteering easy and all of Minden Hills will benefit.

Build your strength with simple exercises

Push-ups are awesome! They can be done anywhere. All types are effective. At the wall, on your knees, or on your toes. They can be simple or fancy – think of the one-arm push-ups that Sylvester Stallone did in one of the many Rocky movies.

The best part is that push-ups build strength! They are a compound exercise, and that means that they work more than one muscle at a time, unlike the bicep curl that only works, you guessed it, the bicep. That is known as an isolation exercise. Not as effective when it come to overall strength. And kind of a waste of time.

Different from cardio exercises (walking/running) that strengthen the heart and improve circulation, weight/strength/resistance training targets various muscle groups of the body. Many people like to use weight machines. Some folks like to use free weights (barbell/dumbbells). And of late, there has been a trend back to body weight exercises (did someone say “push-ups”?).

“Use it or lose it” ~ Jimmy Connors

Regardless of the method, it is imperative to keep our bodies strong. By not moving, our nerves and muscles stop communicating and we lose motor skills. By putting ourselves through a series of activities that connection stays strong - or can actually be rejuvenated. That is how amazing the human body is. Just because you may have lost it, doesn't mean it's gone for good.

If you're not doing anything at the moment, try adding a few push-ups to your day. At the wall, from your knees or your toes - it doesn't matter. You will get stronger. That is for sure.

Something to think about.

Anniversary for local Grannies chapter

by DARREN LUM
Times Staff

Love fueled grandmothers Mickey Bonham and Sue Reid to start the local chapter in the Highlands for the Grandmothers to Grandmothers campaign 10 years ago to help grandmothers in Africa raise a generation of babies orphaned by the AIDS crisis in the 1990s.

Back in August 2006, the pair watched the television broadcast of the Grandmothers' Gathering, hosted by the Stephen Lewis Foundation in Toronto, with great interest. This event included 100 grandmothers from Africa and 200 Canadian grandmothers who came together to address the challenges facing grandmothers in Africa who stepped in to raise the orphaned children.

"I thought to myself: what better place than Haliburton to start a grandmothers' group? There's so many older people up here," Bonham said.

The co-founders of the Haliburton Highlands Grannies greatly respected Lewis, a Canadian and, at the time, the United Nations secretary-general's special envoy for HIV/AIDS in Africa. They wanted to help and discussed the idea of a local chapter. It led to the first meeting for the Highlands Grannies around Reid's dining table soon after the gathering. It included Cathy MacLean, Donna Colby, Sandy Valentine and Jesse Pflug. Before Haliburton started its chapter there were close to 50 chapters already formed.

The Grannies held a Christmas event with a variety of musical guests where they sold goods and refreshments at Pflug's Stouffer Mill Bed and Breakfast Getaway. It not only raised $2,000, but brought attention to the cause. Following that event the group grew by 25 new members.

"When Sue and I started it, I was hoping for five years. I was aiming to lead for five years and hopefully make maybe $50,000 and the fact that it has carried on – now we're at 10 years. We've made $80,000. I think that's amazing. It's wonderful," Bonham said. "Sometimes these things run their course."

She said there has been $25 million raised in the last 10 years by 240 chapters in Canada.

Reid said for her it all started with wanting to be part of the solution. This desire remains at the heart of the steady growth for the group.

"When we started there were very few people, but at this point there's ... 80 members. Obviously the interest is here," she said.

When the group started, the numbers only warranted a kitchen table, but now the group requires a hall if they all want to meet. Although there is a small core group, who come to all the meetings, there are many who help in other ways.

As a result of the efforts of the chapters in Canada through the Stephen Lewis Foundation, the grandmothers in Africa have become more empowered over the years, Bonham said.

"They're really starting to speak out for themselves and try to get more help from their governments," she said.

The local chapter and all chapters send the money they raise to the Stephen Lewis Foundation, which then uses the funds to support community organizations in 15 sub-Saharan countries in Africa. The organizations help to provide support groups, children's programming, food programming, and clinics.

"It makes me feel good that the foundation is being successful and also that these people are getting the help that they need," she said.

In recent years, the organization's core group of members have become busy with other causes. Although the Grannies make appearances at other organizations' event, they have kept the Grannies' offerings to the three main events: the Fall Festival at the Abbey Gardens, the Spring Tea and the provision of concession items at Haliburton International Film Festival.

AIDS no longer grabs as many headlines, but the need is still there for the children and the grandmothers.

Bonham sees importance to the continued efforts of the group, particularly since the babies that were cared for by the African grannies will be in their 20s in 10 years.

"So that carries us through so that we've managed to help a group of young African people to grow up through helping their grandmothers," she said. "We've helped them to grow up and hopefully grow up in a more positive way so that they have a better life."

Unlike other chapters, where interest is waning, the local chapter continues to remain strong and has grown steadily over the years. It's a trend Reid would like to see continue.

"We are hoping to continue the interest and with the demographic up here I would think there is a lot of grandmothers.

The Haliburton Highlands Grannies are close to hitting their 10th anniversary and continue to raise money and awareness from events such as their Grannies Spring Tea on Sunday, May 29, at the Haliburton Legion. Co-founders Mickey Bonham and Sue Reid are proud and believe the need for their efforts is still required. The chapter was formed from the Grandmothers to Grandmothers Campaign, which is an initiative of the Stephen Lewis Foundation that helps community level organizations in Africa to provide grandmothers and the children orphaned by AIDS in their care with necessities of life such as counselling, nutrition, shelter, school supplies and activities to generate income./DARREN LUM Staff

We hope that it will continue to earn money for the Stephen Lewis Foundation," she said.

Membership isn't exclusive to grandmothers, she said. It includes anyone with a heart and as former spokesperson Jacqui Clarkson has said publicly, the club includes grandmothers and "grandmothers."

Reid emphasizes this point and welcomes everyone. "Because we're supporting grandmothers doesn't mean you have to be a grandmother to be a member," she said, adding the main component is caring. "I think this community is such a caring community. Witness the way everybody supported the [Minden] flood victims and, right now, the way a great number of people who are supporting the refugee family who is to come. I think this community has outreach on its mind."

Because we're supporting grandmothers doesn't mean you have to be a grandmother to be a member.

New book critical of psychiatric system

Connie Neal, a survivor of electroconvulsive therapy (ECT), will launch her book, AFTERSHOCK: Raised Consciousness Crumbles SHAM Psychiatric System at the Minden Hills Cultural Centre this Saturday, July 16.

"As a shock survivor, threatened for the second time after 50 years of freedom, I wrote Aftershock on psychiatry's expanding portals that now include elder restraint," says Neil. "Their DSM boss text falsely characterizes natural life events as illness. My purpose is to replace psychiatry with compassionate remedies. It is my recovery of mental balance through lessons in native teachings, shamanism, Buddhism and meditative magical healings. It grew a shock survivor into an anti-psychiatry activist. In this survivor report I offer what works to restore balance with compassion."

As Bonnie Burstow, author of Psychiatry and the Business of Madness says, "This book is by a survivor/activist who is grounded in the lived reality of receiving ECT and fighting against it. As someone who has been there and has for decades fought for self and others, Connie is an expert on what she addresses. For anyone interested in either the ECT survivor experience or activism, this is an important read. Read, learn, then join the struggle."

Neil was an organizer of a recent Toronto protest against ECT and the American Psychiatric Association and is one of the seven-member Coalition to Stop Electroshock that recently presented a report to the Ontario legislature.

A member of the Algonquin Highlands Writers Circle and Bobcaygeon Writers Guild, Neil has authored numerous short stories and articles, including a cover story on institutional elder abuse for Phoenix Rising.

The launch will take place from 2 to 4 p.m. at the cultural centre and feature a talk by Neil, along with the music of Gord Kidd.

For more information, or to order a copy of the book, contact Neil at conneil39@yahoo.ca.

Dorset Art and Garden Tour will light up your weekend

If you really want to get to know the Dorset area, take the Dorset Art and Garden Tour on Saturday, July 23 and Sunday, July 24, 10 to 5 p.m. It's free, and it takes you down winding scenic roads you never knew Dorset had. It's real, 'cause it plunks you right in the middle of the gardens, studios and homes of the creative people who live in and around Dorset, and it's fun 'cause you get to meet the fascinating, brave and sometimes eccentric creators behind the works of art and hear their stories. International tourists would pay big bucks to have such a close-up peek into rural, Canadian life and culture. Beautiful works of art have evolved from everyday life in Dorset, each one a unique and very Canadian response to the beauty that surrounds the artists and gardeners: pottery by Tara Gilchrist; paintings by Brenda Turnour, Lynne Hollingsworth, Jill Segal and Elizabeth Johnson; sculptures by Elise Muller, Peter Kourtz and Chris Keene; fibre art by Carolyn Misener; fine wood furniture by Cirvan Hamilton and wood-turned bowls by Bob Scott; jewelry and creative designs by Kate Weatherell and Diana Scott, plus all their beautiful gardens and those of Jeaninne Dunn and Diane and Gary Thompson. A bright red painted flower is the logo that demarks the Dorset Art and Garden Tour. Now in its second year, the tour promises you a unique, educational and exciting weekend with its expanded palette of studios and gardens. The little piece of Muskoka or Haliburton that you take home with you will be a source of endless pleasure. Brochures with maps of the tour, of local restaurants and of places of interest are available at all Dorset businesses and studios. Facebook: Dorset Art and Garden Tour Events: Dorsetcanada.com

Gull Lake cottager sinks hole-in-one at Beaverbrook

by JENN WATT
Editor

Stewart Pye kept his enthusiasm in check when he lost track of his ball on the sixth hole on a hot Wednesday morning at Beaverbrook Golf Course in Minden.

With 218 yards from the tee, it seemed too much to ask that his shot had gone straight in the hole.

"I was skeptical," Pye says. He didn't want to look. Christine Chessell was with him and said she, too, wasn't certain the ball had gone in.

But when he made his way to the hole, there it was. Pye's first hole-in-one Chessell and Pye say the experience was thrilling and visceral. They were literally tingling with excitement.

Pye has been golfing for 35 years – since he was eight years old – and this is the first time he has sunk a hole-in-one.

It was also his first time at Beaverbrook Golf Course, which he called beautiful. Chessell and Pye live in Thamesford, near Stratford, Ont., and were staying at their cottage on Gull Lake.

This golf ball is the very one that delivered a hole-in-one

Stewart Pye and Christine Chessell celebrate Pye's hole-in-one at Beaverbrook Golf Course. Pye has been golfing for 35 years and this is his first hole-in-one, which he achieved on the sixth hole – a Par 3. JENN WATT Staff

Up River Trading Co. expands

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

Minden's Up River Trading Co. has a new neighbour – Up River Trading Co.

The downtown business has expanded into the building next door, at the corner of Bobcaygeon Road and Newcastle Street.

"We have more walls and more floor space," says owner Mike McKeon, "so we can really show some unique art. Most importantly, we have more display space for our printing."

Along with home furnishings, decor and art, Up River Trading Co. offers customizable digital printing on clothing, pillows, etc., done by designer and co-owner Paul Roy.

"We recently upgraded our equipment," McKeon says. "It really gives us more quality."

Customizable templates include odes to cottage country lakes printed on T-shirts and other clothing and baby pillows bearing the name, birthdate and size of newborns.

Designs can also be customized from scratch.

The business will also be offering the printing of digital photos on canvas, which McKeon says can be overlaid with lettering.

"It can be your lake, it can be your cottage name," he says.

AFTERSHOCK is my story of forced shock treatment causing brain damage, my activist battle to ban ECT, and my recovery of mental balance. Every family with a vulnerable member needs this book. Psychiatry now uses ECT as elder restraint and their DSM boss text falsely characterizes natural life events as illness. Lets stop them.

accompanied by yellow lab Taffy. She heads outside while the two cats reluctantly wait for the Keurig to brew a cup of coffee before their breakfast is served up. Not all schedules however run so smoothly. Granddaughter Emma's expected Monday afternoon arrival back from a week's business trip to London, England did not happen. Her return flight with Air Transit was delayed and her new expected time of arrival set for 2 a.m. Tuesday morning. Thankfully true love prevails with boyfriend Chris still planning to meet her at Pearson but Emma is due to begin her six month fulltime Producers Laboratory at the Canadian Film Centre at 10 a.m. that same morning. This beautiful, multi-talented girl who aspired since childhood to be centre stage has of necessity found her niche in writing and producing. We are very proud and excited for her and trust that "jet lag" will not be misinterpreted on day 1 as other than that. Go for it "Georgia Pie."

City of Kawartha Lakes' Mayor Andy Letham's Town Hall Meeting held this past Sunday afternoon in the Kinmount Community Centre was one in a series of 10 such events across the City. His presentation focussed on both certain elements of the core services review process and the three options being considered for changes in existing Ward boundaries and the resultant number of Councillors assigned to each option. There is a request for public input on these three options with information available on the City website.

Here is a call for two vendor opportunities. On Saturday, July 30 the Kinmount Seniors Group will hold its annual Yard Sale from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. outside at the Railway Station. Tables are $8 and can be booked by calling Rose at 705-286-0365. Then on Saturday, Aug. 6 Kinmount's Family Funfest" will liven up Main Street from 4 to 9 p.m. There is free space available for vendors, yard sales and community groups which can be reserved now by calling 705-488-2919.

As part of its relocation from Main Street, Kinmount to a home based Salon JC's Cuts & More at 3718 County Road 121 now has a ramp providing accessibility for those with mobility issues and/or equipment. While Jessica continued to provide great service over the winter months I avoided hair-cuts reluctant to tackle stairs. With the ramp now in place there will be no legitimate excuse for my unkept winter locks.

Kinmount United Church will hold its annual "Service in the Park" this Sunday, July 17 beginning at 10 a.m. with Rev. Desmond Howard presiding. The Service will be held in the Picnic Pavilion area of Austin Sawmill Heritage Park and there will be a barbecue to follow. Everyone is invited to join in the Service and fellowship while enjoying the beautiful setting beside the Burnt River. With all the tumult now facing our world and in particular our good neighbours to the south it is fitting to sometimes take time to pause and reflect especially surrounded by the beauty of our natural environment.

At St. James Anglican Church, Kinmount a second Pancake Breakfast will be served in the church hall on Saturday, July 30 from 9 to 11 a.m. with pancakes, sausages and real maple syrup on the menu. The cost is by donation.

Speaking of the tumult nephew Alistair who recently flew here from Dallas for Bruce's birthday celebration lives outside the city core in the suburb of Grand Prairie. His work at corporate headquarters takes him downtown daily where one of his company's several restaurant chains has an outlet still in lockdown. I note that this column has been written under duress with tuxedo cat Jake stretched out across the desk with two of his favourite things - paper and a breeze. Until next week keep busy, positive and well. They go together...
